Act 1	Act 1	NOT AVAILABLE	Suzanne strolled through the park, her beige shirt brushed by the cool morning breeze. Suddenly, Zoe, the tabby cat, darted past, her striped tail a flashing beacon. "Hey, Zoe! What's the rush?" Suzanne called, giggling as she spotted a flurry of startled squirrels. Zoe paused, eyes wide with mischief. "I swear I saw a rabbit!" She crouched low, the grass tickling her belly. "Then let's track it down! I'll bring the popcorn for the show!" Suzanne laughed, imagining a rabbit chase unfolding as the sun warmed the park, its sweet scent mingling with hints of fresh blossoms.
Act 1	Act 1	NOT AVAILABLE	The morning air was thick with the scent of dew-soaked soil as Suzanne knelt, fingers digging into her garden's rich earth. A soft rustle drew her gaze; Zoe, the curious tabby, stalked a plump worm, tail twitching like an eager string. "Not for you, Zoe!" Suzanne chuckled, brushing the dirt off her hands. The cat paused, wide-eyed, feigning innocence before pouncing. "Go on then, troublemaker!" she teased, glancing at the sun filtering through the crooked trees. The gentle rustling leaves whispered secrets, while distant laughter floated by, reminiscent of classic films echoing in charming nostalgia.
Act 1	Act 1	II	Morning light spilled through the twisted branches, illuminating Suzanne's path as she tiptoed through the park. A crisp breeze carried the scent of damp earth. "Psst! Over here!" Zoe, the tabby cat, purred, tail flicking mischievously. She lounged on a mossy rock, half-hidden in shadows. "Zoe! Are you chasing rabbits again?" Suzanne chuckled, reaching out to scratch the cat's chin. "Only the tasty ones!" Zoe winked back, her green eyes sparkling with mischief. Nearby, a squirrel chattered, the sound echoing through the air, adding to the park's eerie charm. A perfect morning for adventures, or perhaps... danger.

Act 1	Act 1	II	Morning light filtered through twisted branches as Suzanne knelt beside her blooming garden, inhaling the scent of damp earth and fresh petals. Suddenly, a soft rustle caught her attention. Zoe, the mischievous tabby, darted toward a cluster of colorful flowers, tail twitching with excitement. "Zoe! No digging!" Suzanne laughed, brushing a curl behind her ear. The cat paused, wide-eyed, ears perked up, a small clump of dirt wedged adorably on her nose. "Just looking for rabbits!" Zoe purred, scratching the ground defiantly. Just then, a distant rustle echoed, sending shivers down Suzanne's spine—this park held secrets best left buried.
